Coloring a Life.

Imagination plays an important part in the coloring of a life. "Don't let your imagination run away with you," is a sentence that has chilled, if not checked, most of us. But imagination is really the master-builder of one's most satisfactory life-structures, and when it "runs away" with one, becomes a dynamo that moves seemingly immovable things. What does imagination mean? Imagining: building a thought-pattern, a mental model, an ideal. "Nothing great was ever achieved without enthusiasm," declares Emerson. Imagination is enthusiasm's vital principle, its inward life, its vitalizing fire. Millions of careers have proved the truth that it is the poised, the patterned, the always-ascending life, the life of the home, the manufactory, the store, the school, the studio, all places where the demands for food, raiment, spiritual sustenance and nourishment for the finer senses are met, that it most thoroughly and adequately colored. All color is caused by vibration, explains Lida A. Churchill, in Delineator. The higher and stronger the vibration the deeper and more beautiful the color. When heart and brain and body all vibrate with high resolves and constant upward reach and endeavor, the life will glow and shine and attract to itself all that makes for health, happiness and holiness.

Scientific Congresses.

That there are too many scientific congresses is the complaint of a writer in the Revue Scientifique. While isolation is a bad thing for the man of science, and while it is essential to his usefulness and reputation that he should at times compare notes with his colleagues, much time, labor, and money is wasted by the multiplicity of these assemblies. A concrete example of the incidental abuses is furnished by the same periodical, in its report of the Medical Congress at Lisbon. One of the chief evils was the diversity of language, although the use of Portuguese was not permitted in the discussions. The reports were distributed so tardily that members of the congress had no time in which to prepare themselves to speak. There were too many reports relating to the same subject, which gave rise to tiresome repetitions. Much time was lost in attending fetes and other entertainments. Moreover, a number of eminent men failed to appear personally, and their papers were read for them by others. Yet the desire of attending congresses is keen, remarks the New York Post, and it would be cruel to deprive the speakers of opportunities to be heard, or to prevent their hearers from manifesting the Christian graces of patience and long suffering.

German Trade With New Zealand.

Besides the United Kingdom and the colonies, Germany is really the only competitor of the United States for business in New Zealand. The trade of the United States is now five times as great as that of Germany, yet the German trade is increasing rapidly. Germany leads the United States in several lines, but the principal one is musical instruments. During the year 1904 it sold in the colony $250,000 worth of pianos (principally), while our sales amounted to less than $32,000. There is really no reason for this important difference except that the German trade is pushed and easy payments are accepted. It is true, says the Daily Consular and Trade Reports, that this trade is mostly in pianos of a cheap grade, but the manufacturers in the United States should be able to sell pianos on equally favorable terms.

Black walnut is produced in this country at an annual rate of about 33,000,000 feet. The larger portion of it now comes from southwestern Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Indian Territory, although there is some scattering growth still picked up in Indiana, Ohio, Tennessee and West Virginia. The most considerable stand of the wood remaining east of the Mississippi River is on the upper waters of the Guyandotte River in West Virginia. The home demand for black walnut lumber is only for comparatively small quantities, says the Southwest. It is largely confined to gun stocks, novelties, electrical work, etc. The chief demand for walnut comes from Germany, and Hamburg is the commercial center of the market.

CONFEDERATE FLAG.

First One Ever Made on Exhibition at Denver.

One of the most interesting and valuable of all the mementoes of the Civil war now in existence recently came into the possession of Col. W. W. Ferguson of the war relic department at the state house. This consists of the very first Confederate flag ever made.

For several years Colonel Ferguson has been endeavoring to get this relic, which was in possession of George S. Hazen, post commander of the G. A. R. post at Meeker, Colorado. Finally his hope was realized, and the fine old piece of bunting, representing an ill-fated cause, is now on display at the department, a curious, pathetic and sadly worn relic.

In 1860, before the outbreak of the Civil war, Mrs. Mary Harbach, whose husband was connected with the South Carolina militia, met with several other ladies and constructed a flag for the new Confederacy. When finished it was presented to the Confederate congress for adoption as its national flag.

But it was first presented to Gen. P. T. Beauregard, in command of the Confederate forces at Charleston, North Carolina, with the request that it would be used by him in replacing the flag then flying over Fort Sumter. It was indeed placed over Fort Sumter, but when afterward submitted to the Confederate congress at Montgomery, Alabama, was rejected in favor of the stars and bars.

Afterward when General Beauregard left Charleston for service in the field and assumed command of the Confederate forces, after the death of Albert Sidney Johnston at Shiloh, he left the flag at his hotel, which he had been using as headquarters. It fell into the hands of Major Harbach of the Second Carolina Infantry.

At the close of the war Major Harbach went into the hotel business at Charleston. A nephew of General Hazen, Harry E. Hazen, was at Charleston after the war to dismantle the fort. He fell in love with a daughter of Major Harbach and afterward came into possession of the flag. He in turn gave it to General Hazen and it descended to George Hazen.

The flag is 12 by 14 feet long. It is made of the best quality of bunting and consists of a white field with a green palmetto tree in the center, surrounded by fifteen red stars. It is all hand-made, showing great skill in its construction.

SILVER STILL CLIMBING.

Mr. Simon Guggenheim Says White Metal is Again to Reach High Price.

What seems like a prophecy founded on a knowledge of the facts is the statement made by Simon Guggenheim of Denver, several months ago, with regard to the price of silver. The white metal is still climbing upward, and is now above 70 cents an ounce. Mr. Guggenheim, who is intensely loyal to Colorado and all her interests, made the announcement some time ago that silver would soon advance and the mining of that metal be once more profitable in the once great silver camps.

"Colorado is a magnificent state," said Mr. Guggenheim, who has been active in her development for eighteen years. "And there is every indication that silver mining is again to be profitable in the famous camps we were so proud of in the old days. In a very few months silver will reach 70 cents, with every prospect of going higher."

This prediction has come true to the delight of every loyal Coloradan. Mr. Guggenheim's companies have been active since silver was demonetized to restore the metal to at least something near its former value. It begins to look as if what was attempted for Colorado by political platforms when silver was an "issue" will be done by persistent work along business lines by men who are able to exert powerful influence in behalf of whatever plans for helping Colorado they have in hand.

Excursion to Brush.

Denver.—On Saturday, the 10th, the Denver Chamber of Commerce will run an excursion to Brush, one of the busy new sugar centers that are springing up in Colorado irrigation districts. The train will leave the Union depot over the Burlington at 9:15 a. m., and return to Denver that evening, leaving Brush at 6 p. m. The run between Denver and Brush is something over two hours, so the greater part of the day will be given to seeing the country adjacent to Brush and in inspecting the new sugar factory that has recently been put in operation for its first campaign.

Coal Land Withdrawn.

Colorado Springs.—Word has been received here that the government has withdrawn from public use more than 46,000 acres of coal land in El Paso county, comprising two entire townships of thirty-six sections each. One township is fifteen miles east of this city, the other being a few miles northwest of Colorado Springs. The maps of the government show extensive deposits of high-grade lignite coal all over the region east of Pike's peak. The government has withdrawn this coal land to prevent the large coal operators from getting control of the fuel supply of the West.

Imperial, Cal.—An official report from Salton sea says that the water flooding into the sink from the Colorado river is receding and about eighty-seven per cent. of the regular flow of the river is now under control. It is considered practically certain that the river will be completely turned into the old channel in a day or two.

The Common Evil.

THEY CURE RHEUMATISM

A Particularly Painful Form of This Disease Yields to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Of the many forms which rheumatism takes, that which is popularly known as sciatic rheumatism probably tortures its victim more than any other. That Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured this stubborn as well as painful trouble is a fact proven by the following statement, and no sufferer who reads this can afford to let prejudice stand in the way of trying these blood-making pills.

Rheumatism is now generally recognized as a disease of the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make—actually make—pure blood. When the blood is pure there can be no rheumatism. Mrs. Thomas Bremehan, of 54 Mill street, Watertown, N. Y., says:

"My trouble began with a severe cold which I took about a week before Christmas in 1904. I began to have rheumatic pains in my back and limbs and after a time I couldn't straighten up. I suffered the most awful pain for months and much of the time was unable to leave the house and I had to take hold of a chair in order to walk and sometimes I could not stand up at all."

"The disease was pronounced sciatic rheumatism and, although I had a good physician and took his medicine faithfully, I did not get any better. After some six weeks of this terrible pain and suffering I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and that is the medicine that cured me. After a few boxes the pain was less intense and I could see decided improvement. I continued to take the pills until I was entirely cured and I have never had any return of the trouble."

All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or the remedy will be mailed post-paid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.
